Armament of Europe. Some of us are old enough to remember the chorus of philanthropic applause with which the first of the great world fairs—that of London in 1851—was hailed by the good people of both hemispheres. They said—and doubtless believed—that a new and beneficent era had dawned upon Christendom; that the millennium, if not actually at hand, was at least in sight, that this magnificent exhibition of the fruits of peaceful industry was the dawn of the long promised day when "swords shall be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks," when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Yet it would seem as if that Congress of peace had ushered in such a period of war as the world has rarely seen.

First came the Crimean war, then the war of the Indian mutiny, then the war between Austria and Italy, then the war of France and Italy against Austria, then the Austro-Prussian war, then our own civil war, then the Russo-Russian war, and then the Franco-German war, without counting a half dozen or more minor wars in which Christian nations were engaged.

To-day Europe happens to be at peace, yet never in all history were there such preparations for war as now. Take the five continental powers as sufficient illustration. Russia has, in round numbers, 5,000,000 drilled and disciplined soldiers; Germany, 3,500,000; France, 3,000,000; Austria, 2,000,000; Italy, 1,500,000, making a total of 15,000,000 trained fighters, ready for fight, say nothing of the naval forces or of the military establishments of the smaller nations. The legions, or regular army of Rome never amounted to over 300,000 men when the imperial power was at its height, and if we add the auxiliaries, or irregulars, the total will not exceed 700,000 at the utmost. Italy alone can muster double that number.

"The grand army" with which Napoleon crossed the Niemen for the invasion of Russia in 1812, had 325,000 men actually present for duty. Germany alone put 500,000 in the field for the war of 1870-71. And it is needless to say, all the great European powers are increasing their armament from year to year, so that to-day Europe is only a vast combination of barracks and camp.

Evidently, then, the transformation swords and spears into plow shares and pruning hooks has been indefinitely postponed, and if the wolf is dwelling with the lamb in peace and harmony, it is because the lamb has just furnished the wolf's dinner.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A PREACHER HERO.—With her head hanging down toward a dizzy gorge, 160 feet below, and tightly wedged between the iron stays on the new Niagara Falls suspension bridge, Mrs. Gremason, who is a woman weighing 250 pounds and is from Toronto, seemed in imminent danger of a frightful death, but was saved by a keen-witted Irishman.

She, her two daughters, the Rev. John Ramsey, of Ballymoney, Ireland, and two other friends were walking across the new bridge from the American to the Canadian side, when suddenly Mrs. Gremason slipped off the edge of the narrow foot walk which is raised several inches from the roadway, and pitched toward the edge of the ridge. In her frantic struggle to regain her feet, she pitched down over the edge and between the iron stays. Her death seemed certain, but her body and feet caught the gas pipe which crossed the bridge.

Her screams for aid were heartrending and death seemed only a few seconds away. Mr. Ramsey determined to save her, and quick as a flash he sprang over the railing and grasped a cable lowering himself to the lowest girder. He grasped the woman. She clung to him in terror mingled with gladness.

They clung there together, and just as their tired muscles were giving way, Chief of Police Young lowered ropes and pulled the two safely on the bridge. Mrs. Gremason wept and sobbed and was completely prostrated.

Mr. Ramsey, who is attending the Pan-Presbyterian conference at Toronto, was the hero of the occasion. In the struggle for life he lost his hat, and Mrs. Gremason her gold watch.

BELONGED TO JEFFERSON DAVIS.—A family carriage with an interesting bit of history is stored for sale among the second hand vehicles in one of the large apartments of John M. Hardy & Son's carriage factory and repository in Staunton. It was the family carriage of the late Jefferson Davis, President of the Southern Confederacy, and was left by him at the Warm Springs, Bath county, at the end of a season that he and his family spent there some years ago. At a general sale of personal property that took place about five years ago, in exchange of the management of the springs, the carriage was bought by Mr. Dunn, a wealthy gentleman of Washington, who spends every summer on his farm near Warm Springs. Mr. Dunn sent it about a year ago to Mr. Hardy. He intended to have it rebuilt for his own use, but afterward changed his mind.
